Selective Service Says All 18 Year Olds Must Be Examined

Virginia Selective Service Local Boards will begin in July to order 18-year-old registrants for complete examination by the Armed Forces, the Virginia State Director of Selective Service said today.

The State Director emphasized that the examination of 18-year-olds does NOT mean that they face induction in the immediate future.

The examination of 18-year-olds who are out of school and not deferred for other reasons initiates a program announced by President Johnson on January 5, 1964. The President directed the Secretary of Defense and the Director of Selective Service to begin the early examination of 18-year-old registrants after a presidential task force study determined that large numbers of young men being found disqualified for military service were interested in obtaining educational, vocational, and medical rehabilitation.

In announcing the plan to examine 18-year-olds, the President pointed out that early examination will "... enable those who are qualified for military service to plan intelligently their future careers in this respect. It will enable those found unqualified to get to work promptly on the education, training, or health services which can be of benefit to them".

The President also noted that "... early examination will NOT mean early induction. There will be no change in the present practice of calling older registrants for actual induction into the Armed Forces before younger ones are called."

At the present time, men are being reached for induction between 21 and 22, as a national average. In Virginia the average age of involuntary induction is the same, the State Director said.

Production By Southern Guild Praised By Critic

...AM HOFFMAN

...Note: William Hoff... Virginia's very ...ssible, kindly con... review the Southern ...ild production of ...ild Shaw's "Arms ...d," the Guild's first ...mmerk summer ...Hoffman, who re... from Farmville to ...ort House, is the ...our novels, "The ...ibbers," "A Place ...ad," "Days of the ...," "The Dark Moun... several magazine ar... is presently working on his fifth novel.)

People worried about the softness of the younger generation should have attended the opening production of the Southern Actors' Guild, "Arms and the Man," at Drakes Branch, on Friday June 26.

A group of eight very excellent young people, some still in college, some just graduated, conceived an ambitious and essentially foolhardy plan of establishing a repertory theater in an abandoned movie house here in Southside Virginia.

The decision to go ahead with the plan was a courageous one and required real character to bring to fruition. Impossible barriers lay in the way of success. Naturally there was no money. There never is among young actors. The money had to be solicited. There was no stage. That had to be built. There were no costumes or scenery. Those had to be borrowed, altered, and patched. The only item in plentiful supply was doubt in the minds of the well-wishers that the project could be pulled off at all.

Welll was pulled off in first-class manner, and productions will continue to be offered each Friday and Saturday evening for the next eight weeks at the Drakes Branch theater. "Arms and the Man" was a solid success. These young people not only have courage and enterprise, but also a great deal of talent. They did not timidly stick their toes into the play. They jumped into G. B. Shaw's comedy with both feet, splashing up a rousing and hilarious time.

I've never cared much for G. B. Shaw's comedies, but I liked this one. The cast had just the right attitude toward the story—a let's - have - fun - out - of-this-play spirit which fingered Shaw's sermons about war and the soldier only lightly. The sermons seemed dated today, and the actors were right to treat them thus.

I found the performances not only of a high quality but remarkably even. Nobody was upstaging anybody else. One had a sense of the actors being conscious of their contrapuntal needs and their willingness to mesh lines into the total play rather than to create individual fireworks — except where Shaw intended that fireworks be shot off.

The cast included the founders of the Southern Actors' Guild with the exception of Pat Newton: Betty Ann Atkinson as a riotous Catherine, Jo Ann Sid as a wide-eyed apostle of "the blyter love," Linda Anderson as a sultry servant, Bill MacGuire the practical soldier and lover, David Reiyea as there perfectly colly factotom, Ed Baker who shows high comic ability, and Mike Coachman who succeeded in really making his shirt seem stuffed. Randy Tucker played a walk-on role as the Russian officer.

These actors not only perform well, but also change the sets between scenes. There is no curtain on the stage designed by Christopher Cabel of the Barksdale Dinner Theater in Richmond, and the actors, while still in the sweat of their renderings, must quickly shift the scenery. They do it openly, honestly, and well. It most certainly does not detract from the play.

The polish and verve with which the actors handle themselves reflects both the fact that all of them have been active in college dramatics (Longwood Hampden-Sydney, and Madison) and the skilled touch of Mr. Harvey Jeffreys, head of the dramatic department at Blackstone High School who has given of himself for the entire summer. Mr. Jeffreys has won several awards for his productions and is a practicing playwright.

There are eight more plays to be done—each play alternating twice on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30. Presenting them requires a brutal amount of work in order that these young actors be ready in just five days for another performance. They labor hard and with disciplined dedication. Most of us have it easy in comparison. They deserve the full suport of Southside Virginians in this brave effort to bring live theater to section of the state too long without it.

Once again, curtain time is 8:30 for performances of a new play on Friday and Saturday evenings. The theater is air-conditioned. Your dollar admission ticket won't be given in charity. You'll receive honest value and perhaps feel, as I did, a gnawing envy that you're no longer young enough to get aboard.

THE SENATE RULES—Committee approved a resolution on Monday which would require senators and ther top aides to disclose their major sources of outside income. The move grew out of the committee's investigation into the affairs of former Senate Democratic Secretary, Bobby Baker, who quit under fire last October. The resolution would not require senators to reveal the exact size of their holdings nor the exact amount of the income.

Drought Erosion Check

Area Counties To Share In $575,000 Ground Cover Aid

A number of counties will share in $575,000 in new Federal emergency conservation assistance to help reestablish vegetative cover damaged by drought over a prolonged period.

Announcement of the U. S. Department of Agriculture decision was made Friday. Included among the 64 Virginia counties eligible for emergency benefits are Amelia, Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Nottoway, Powhatan and Prince Edward.

No follow-up announcement of specific amounts allotted to each county has been made, but county ASCS offices expect to learn this quickly.

Erosion Check

The measures to be undertaken under the program, USDA said, will be reestablishment of permanent vegetative cover destroyed or seriously damaged by drought on lands which will be subject to serious erosion unless the cover is reestablished.

The Washington announcement noted that Public Law 85-58 authorizes the secretary to designate disaster areas for emergency assistance to restore land damaged by natural disasters, and to allocate funds for cost-sharing emergency conservation measures for them.

ASCS In Charge

The funds will be administered by state and county ASC committees through the regular Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP), the department explained.

Under ACP the government shares the cost of conservation construed as needed to assure in the public interest the wise use, protection and improvement of soil and water resources on farm lands.

The emergency assistance is in addition to ACP and can be made available to aid farmers anywhere in the United States when lands are damaged by natural disaster, USDA noted.

Farm Questions

(Editor's note: Here are some questions asked by Virginia farmers during the past week as reported by county agricultural agents. Staff members of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Agricultural Extension Service and-or Experiment Station supply the answers.)

Q — Is there any new material being developed that will replace heptachlor for fall treatment of alfalfa for weevil control?

A — None for fall treatment. New materials are being tested for spring use.

* * *

Q — Should I cut alfalfa and spray the stubble immediately after getting up the hay, for weevil control?

A — Yes.

* * *

Q — What is the best way to control ground rats in flower borders and lawns?

A — Trap them with live traps (box traps) and dispose of them. Plans for such traps are available from the Agricultural county agent for Circular 667, or write to the Service at VPI, Blacksburg.

* * *

Q — How is the best way to fertilize pasture that has not been fertilized yet, but which a soil test shows should be fertilized?

A — Pasture fertilization varies with the mixture of grasses and legumes being grown and the management it is given. See a copy of VPI Bulletin 194, "Good Pastures" for further information. Copies are available from your county agent.

* * *

Q — Should liquid nitrogen be applied on sudan grass at planting time?

A — Liquid nitrogen can be used on sudan grass. It should be applied before planting or before the grass emerges.

* * *

Q — Using soil sample results when would you fertilize soybeans? What analysis fertilizer would you use

A — Direct application of fertilizer on soybeans is not recommended. Usually the preceding crop receives the fertilizer. However, if the soil test results are extremely low, the addition of 300 pounds per acre of an 0-14-14 fertilizer will probably increase yields.

* * *

Q — How is the best way to seed rye for winter cover in a field that is kept in continuous corn? The corn is picked in December.

A — Varying degrees of success have been obtained in Tidewater Virginia by airplane seeding about September. The stand depends on weather conditions and other factors at time of seeding.

* * *

Q — What are we going to do about a replacement for alfalfa? That is, what can farmers plant instead of alfalfa?

A — Even with present control methods of combating the alfalfa weevil, if high yields of alfalfa are maintained, alfalfa is competitive with other hay crops such as red clover, lespedeza, sudan grass, or pearl millet in the cost per unit of nutrients produced. Alternatives include corn silage, and above mentioned crops, and getting more feed from pasture. The cropping system developed will depend on the individual farm situation.

* * *

Q — I disced in 600 pounds of 3-18-18, applied 80 pounds of nitrogen, and two pounds of atrazine after planting corn. I have a poor stand. What must I do?

A — Keep what you have if the stand warrants it; if not, replant.

REPUBLICANS have criticized President Johnson for asking Congress to go on a six-day work week until the Republican national convention which opens on July 13. "It just isn't fair play," said Rep. Charles Halleck (Ind.), GOP floor leader. The Republican platform committee begins work in San Francisco July 6, one week before the convention. Many GOP Congressmen are on this committee, and it had been assumed the House would be in recess during this week. But Johnson at a news conference asked Congress to work longer and take action on about 30 "desirable" proposals before final adjournment.
